Scottish Government	Good Practice Principles for Shared Ownership of Onshore Renewable Energy Developments (Draft for Public Consultation)	9 June	This document is intended to set out good practice expectations for developers, communities and other stakeholders, as well as providing guidance on how best to deliver shared ownership projects. The document once finalised, will sit as an annex to the existing “Good Practice Principles for Community Benefits from Onshore Renewable Energy Developments” published in April 2014 and available at www.localenergyscotland.org/goodpractice . The Scottish Government has been supportive of the shared ownership projects delivered in recent years, but recognises that considerable hurdles and issues remain before projects will be delivered as standard on a large scale. While progress to date is welcomed, there remains great potential for Scotland’s communities to engage with, and benefit from, renewable energy developments.	Pending
